

RING,

Is, where will I go? will go, where he can rely absolutely on what is told him, because few men are judges of diamonds, and must rely upon what a dealer tells them. The most important then for him to decide is where is the Most Reliable Jeweler and where can he receive the best treatment and get full value for his money. It is useless for us to say that there is no que tion about our reliability and about the absolute truth you will receive at our hands.

We also are in a position to sell you a hand-some piece of jewelry, either in Diamond Rings or other Precious Stones at extremely low of Louis XVI. Over all was the soft rosy glow of myriads of electric lights veiled with rose shades.

The music was a treat within itself, and the delicious retreshments and the manner of their serving were perfection.

Very many beautiful gowns were worn; one especially artistic frock was in shades of pink so charmingly blended that the wearer might well have typified a La France rose.

Mrs. Duke's gown was an especially dalnty affair in paiest pink trimmed with graceful curved lines of chiffon ruching of a deeper pink. A draped girdle of rose pink velvet was about the waist and the high correspe was completed by a high collar formed of strands of pearls held at intervals by lines of glowing tubies. A true lovers knot of pink velvet was in her hair, and pink gloves and a pearl chain completed the costume.

Mrs. Basil Duke, a stately dame, with the gentle courtesy of the old school, was gowned in black satin grenadine trimmed with valenciennes lace. In her hair, she wore duchesse lace.

Miss Gentry was in bine and white broraded slik, the bodice formed of crosswise loids in Grecian effect, Miss Alexander wore orange silk veiled with splendid black lare. Miss Martha Brent adorned a charming frock of blue silk trimmed with pearls.

Appropriate Present

For Your Husband. Why not present him with a half dozen well made shirts, made to order and to fit? This year presents are tending more to something substantial than the little friedlities and nick-marks of the past.

What more substantial, useful and beautiful could you present him than a half dozen fine shirts made to fit? fit?
The average man has not the time to go to a shirt anufacturer to have shirts made, but orders of the adversade dealer by the size of his neck-he is containly wearing an unconfortable and had fitting gament.

That our advertising will bring results, also to necommodate the patrons, we have decided that any order placed with us before the 21st of this month, we will make and deliver by christmas moraling. It will be unnecessary for the gentleman to come done of the patrons of our will send one of our men to his place of husiness and take the measurements.
